

At luncheon on board the Foch special train Marshal Foch had as his guest Hanford McNider, new national commander of the American Legion.
(c) 1921, Gravelle.

A new portrait of Premier Aristide Briand of France, whose great address to the armament conference eloquently set forth his country's problems of defence.
(c) Harris & Ewing.

Above—Marshal Foch added another to his collection of American university degrees at Columbia when he became doctor of laws. The photograph shows the Marshal and President Nicholas Murray Butler.
International.

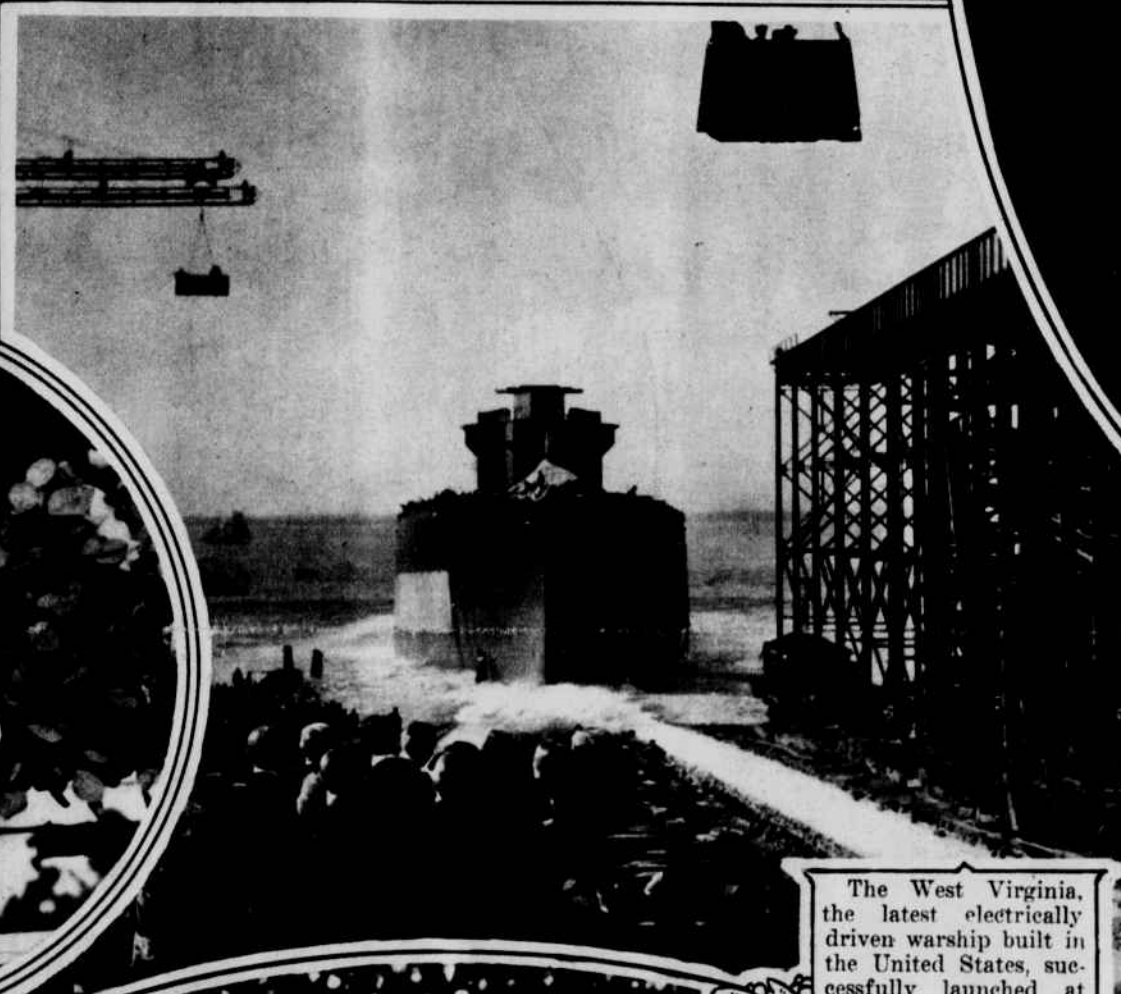

At right—Miss Alice Mann, who christened the new superdreadnought West Virginia on the occasion of the launching at Newport News, Va.
International.

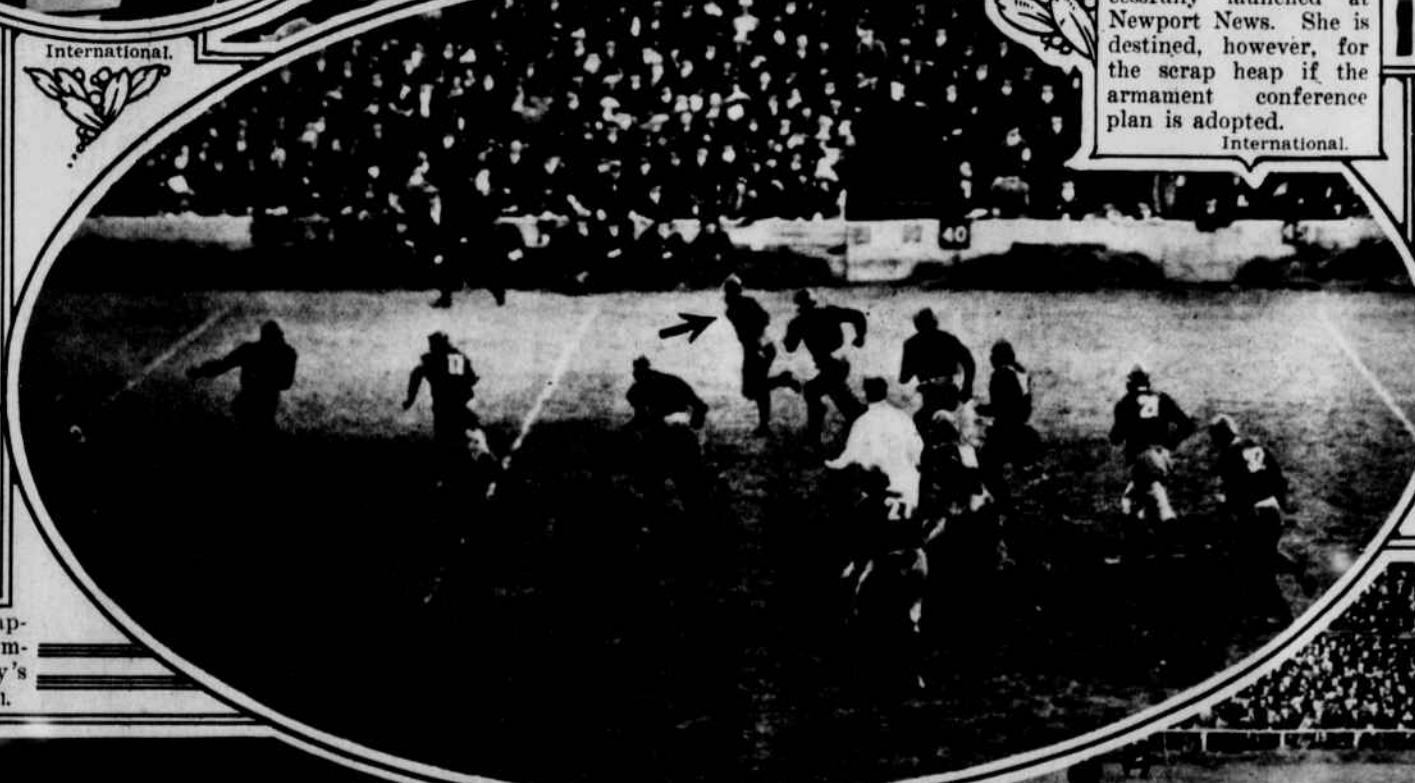

Baron Edmund von Therman, the newly appointed Charge d'Affaires of the German Embassy, arriving to take charge of his country's interests in Washington.
International.

A lively scrimmage in the game at Cambridge in which Harvard defeated Yale, 10-3.
Paul Thompson.

The West Virginia, the latest electrically driven warship built in the United States, successfully launched at Newport News. She is destined, however, for the scrap heap if the armament conference plan is adopted.
International.

Above—This photograph shows Buell of Harvard starting his run which resulted in the deciding score of the game and Harvard's victory over Yale. Arrow indicates Buell.
(c) Keystone View Co.

Hunting mountain goats by seaplane is a new sport at San Clemente Island, off the harbor of Los Angeles. The goats are retrieved by motorecycle.
Gilliams.

Owen of Harvard going through the Yale line for a gain in the hard fought battle of Cambridge.
International.